500-year mystery solved: Richard III's remains unearthed in parking lot

Reuters

LEICESTER, England A skeleton with a cleaved skull and a curved spine dug up from under a parking lot is that of Richard III, archaeologists said Monday, solving a 500-year-old mystery about the final resting place of the last English king to die in battle.

Cast by Shakespeare as a deformed tyrant who murdered two princes in the Tower of London, Richard was slain as he fought to keep his crown at the Battle of Bosworth Field in 1485, crying out: "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!"

In one of the most significant archaeological finds in recent English history, a team from the University of Leicester said evidence showed a skeleton found last year in excavations of a mediaeval friary under a city parking lot was that of Richard.

"It's the academic conclusion ... that beyond reasonable doubt, the individual exhumed at Grey Friars in September 2012 is indeed Richard III, the last Plantagenet king of England," lead archaeologist Richard Buckley said.

The skeleton had 10 wounds, eight of them to the head, clearly inflicted in battle and suggesting the king had lost his helmet. The skull showed a blade had hacked away part of the rear of the skull. A metal fragment was found in the vertebrae.

The victor, the future King Henry VII, had Richard's naked body exposed to the people of Leicester to show the battle was won, ending the bloody 30-year civil conflict known as The Wars of the Roses between the houses of York and Lancaster.

Other wounds likely were caused after death, when his body was taken from the battlefield to nearby Leicester on the back of a horse. All of the "humiliation" wounds in his final hours were from swords, daggers or halberds and it appeared his hands had been bound. The feet were missing.

Confirmation that the bones were Richard's hinged on DNA taken from the skeleton matching that of Michael Ibsen, a Canadian-born furniture maker in London whom genealogists said was the direct descendant of Richard's sister, Anne of York.

The skull of Richard III

Admirers of Richard hope that the discovery will help soften the image of Shakespeare's physically impaired protagonist, who said: "And therefore, since I cannot prove a lover ... I am determined to prove a villain."

5 THINGS

- » The curvature of Richard III's spine, so ruthlessly mocked by Shakespeare as "deformed, unfinished" and famously depicted by Laurence Olivier, was striking.
- » The skeleton showed a high-protein diet of meat and fish that would reflect life at court.
- » Richard, who died at age 32 after two years on the throne, will be interred at Leicester Cathedral, which traces its history to a Saxon bishop in AD 680, in line with guidelines about burying bodies close to where they are exhumed.
- » The gray concrete parking lot with its red-brick walls and a payment kiosk, under which the bones were found, contrasts sharply with the grandeur of traditional sepulchres for English kings and queens at Windsor Castle and Westminster Abbey.
- » Richard's skeleton, found just 2 feet below the present ground level, indicates that he was slight with a small rib cage. Radiocarbon dating from rib bones indicated they were from a man who died between 1455 and 1540.

Would bus plan eat up parking?

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

No final designs have been unveiled, but some people already are raising concerns about potential options for express bus service along Ashland and Western avenues.

The CTA is evaluating four designs that could remove car traveling lanes, parking lanes, center medians and left turns along Ashland and Western avenues to make way for bus-only lanes that could cut travel time between Fullerton Avenue and 79th Street nearly in half. A preferred design is expected to be presented early this year.

At a meeting last month with the CTA, aldermen and a network of five Near West Side area business groups, some business owners voiced concerns about the "historic and wide-scale transformation" that bus-rapid transit could have on the two corridors, said Roger Romanelli, executive director of the Randolph/Fulton Market Association, one of the coalition groups.

"Our coalition has not taken any official position on [bus rapid transit]. We're studying the issue," Romanelli said. "[The CTA] is talking about eliminating left turns [and] median planters that we spent millions and millions of dollars to build already. ... We're just trying to understand what the impact would be."

Meanwhile, last week, Brian Bonnano, sustainability programs manager with the Andersonville Development Corporation, a neighborhood business group, wrote an open letter asking for any express bus service along Ashland Avenue to extend to the intersection of Ashland and Clark Street, north of Bryn Mawr Avenue.

Current CTA proposals place the northern boundary of this service at Irving Park Road, which mirrors the No. 9 Ashland bus route.

"This corridor currently lacks direct, rapid public transit," Bonnano wrote. "The extension would provide a vital transportation route between the densely populated communities of Ravenswood, Uptown, Edgewater and Andersonville and a myriad of communities."

At an unrelated press conference last week, CTA President Forrest Claypool said no decisions have been made about a preferred design plan. A CTA spokeswoman said no bus rapid transit meetings have been scheduled.

Money talks

The Active Transportation Alliance, a Chicagoland bicycling, walking and transit-riding group, is holding a discussion about the future of public transportation in the Chicago area. The summit will be held 8:30 a.m. to noon Feb. 25 at the UBS Tower Conference Center, 1 N. Wacker Drive. Go to activetrans.org/TransitSummit2013 for more information.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Kedzie Pink Line

I have very few complaints about this station in North Lawndale. There's some graffiti on ads and signs by the heat lamps on the platform. But what this station (and every other station) needs is a train tracker. CTA President Forrest Claypool said in August that each of the CTA's 145 stations would have a train tracker display within a year. It's especially needed on the Pink Line, which, along with the Yellow Line, didn't see an increase in train service frequency under last year's decrowding plan even though the line saw a 7 percent jump in ridership in 2012 compared to 2011. The Yellow and Pink lines posted some of the highest ridership gains last year. The Kedzie station saw a 10.6 percent ridership boost, the second-biggest Pink Line ridership jump, behind the Cicero and Central Park stops.

New on Applebee's menu: humble pie

By Adam Lukach | REDEYE

Have you heard the one about the waitress who got fired for posting an Applebee's check to Reddit? No? Well it's a doozy.

On Jan. 25, a customer at a St. Louis Applebee's received her check with an added 18 percent gratuity for large parties, as is policy, then crossed out the tip and wrote, "I give God 10% why do you get 18." One employee took a picture of the ticket and uploaded it to Reddit. Applebee's subsequently fired her for posting the customer's information online, a violation of company code, and confirmed it to thesmokinggun.com.

After the firing went public, groups started appearing on Facebook calling for a boycott of Applebee's or campaigning for the waitress to be rehired. Between the Reddit post and blogs following the story, the attention mobilized a small army to wage a social-media war against the company, and Applebee's own corporate Facebook page was bombarded with negative comments.

Industry gossip site ifyoucantaffordtotip.com revealed a photo Applebee's posted weeks ago featuring positive comments for the restaurant but also a customer's information, which sparked a flood of negative comments. According to a blog post from journalist R.L. Stollar, who has chronicled the story, the Applebee's social media account also deleted negative comments in its comment section. The fallout itself became the story.

Fall Out Boy gears up for new album, tour with surprise show

From news services

Fall Out Boy is back. Ending a three-year hiatus that commenced following a 2009 greatest-hits set, Chicago's very own emo-rockers announced Monday that they would release a new album and launch a North American tour in May.

"This isn't a reunion, because we never broke up," the group said in a statement. "We needed to plug back in and make some music that matters to us."

The announcement prompted a flurry of tweets and status updates from fans. A surprise concert Monday at Subterranean in Wicker Park sold out in a matter of minutes, resulting in a flood of Craigslist posts from fans looking to score an elusive ticket.

One poster offered $425 to anyone who could spare a ticket. Another went a step further, writing "I will seriously give you any amount of money you want." There was also a post from a user who was looking to "take the hottest chick possible."

Fall Out Boy—singer-guitarist Patrick Stump, bassist Pete Wentz, guitarist Joe Trohman and drummer Andy Hurley—is scheduled to release "Save Rock and Roll" on May 7; it will be the band's first studio disc since "Folie à Deux" in 2008. The album's lead single, "My Songs Know What You Did in the Dark (Light Em Up)," was released to iTunes on Monday and is available to stream on YouTube.

Although rumors had been circulating that Wentz and co. were planning to once again kick their band into gear, the bassist as late as Saturday told the Tribune, "I'd say ... don't hold your breath that it's happening."

On May 14, the group—which after forming in 2001 went on to platinum sales and a nomination for the new artist Grammy Award—is to begin a six-week tour in Milwaukee. First, though, the band is returning to the stage this week with three small-scale club gigs: Monday's in Chicago, Tuesday in New York and Thursday in L.A.

LOS ANGELES TIMES, TRIBUNE AND REDEYE'S MICK SWASKO AND ADAM LUKACH CONTRIBUTED REPORTING

TRACK REVIEW

'My Songs Know What You Did in the Dark (Light Em Up)'

The group's gratuitous pop-punk sound remains, but the wishy-washy teen angst is gone, replaced by the flames (literally) of anger and a whole lot of "[bleep] it." A-

FALL OUT BOY ARE HARDLY THE FIRST BLAST FROM THE SEMI-RECENT PAST

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Fall Out Boy on Monday announced a new tour (which kicked off at Subterranean), album ("Save Rock and Roll," out May 7) and single ("My Songs Know What You Did in the Dark (Light Em Up)"). But we can't say we're terribly surprised—plenty of our faves have jumped back in the spotlight recently. Here's a trip down new-memories lane.

SHAKE IT TO THE LEFT IF YOU'RE HAVING A GOOD TIME. Americans—and our former British overlords—pretty much freaked the hell out when Sporty, Baby, Ginger, Scary and Posh took center stage in front of an estimated 1 billion viewers to close the Olympics in August. They were so groovy, even London's mayor, Boris Johnson, couldn't resist shaking a tailfeather. "Viva Forever!" the Spice musical, also opened in December to wretched reviews—can't please 'em all.

Back for good? Nope

Justin Timberlake

The event: Website countdown to release of "Suit and Tie." January

We're first to admit we've been grouching for years about the need for a JT return to music. Last month, he did so in as dramatic a fashion as possible, posting a countdown clock to Jan. 14—the release date of his single, "Suit and Tie." Since then, he's revealed the March 19 release date of his first album since 2006, "The 20/20 Experience," and performed a pre-Super Bowl show. The boy is back in town.

Back for good? For now!

OK, OK, we know it was Beyoncé's show. Even though the appearance of Kelly Rowland and Michelle Williams alongside their former diva-in-crime at Sunday's Super Bowl was one of the worst-kept secrets in diva history, the magic certainly wasn't ruined. After all, you have to be pretty fierce to pop out of a trapdoor wearing stilettos, stick the landing, sing backup on Beyoncé's biggest single THEN leave the stage gracefully so as not to get in the way of her dancing.

Wiggity-wiggity-wiggity WHAAAAAAT? It's been more than 20 years since Mac Daddy and Daddy Mac slapped on the backward outfits for "Jump"—yes, that song came out in 1992. Chris Kelly and Chris Smith have joined the lineup of artists honoring the So So Def label's 20th anniversary. Jermaine Dupri, Da Brat and Bow Wow also will perform at the Feb. 23 show, but we're more curious to see how tracks like "I Missed the Bus" have held up.

The Postal Service

The event: 10th anniversary re-release and tour, April

The side project of Death Cab for Cutie's Ben Gibbard and Dntel's Jimmy Tamborello, The Postal Service was never really meant to turn into a permanent gig. The duo released just one album, 2003's "Give Up," which will be re-issued April 9 with 15 bonus tracks. It's not yet known whether the group will put out a new album, but the lack of a Chicago date in a recent tour announcement gives us hope for a fest appearance this summer.

Back for good? Doubtful

98 Degrees/Boyz II Men/ New Kids on the Block

The event: The Package Tour, May

The lesson here: When your fans get old, you get to use a smarmy tour name. NKOTB teamed up with the Backstreet Boys in 2011 and 2012 for a compilation album and tour, and now they're hitting up some new friends. Boyz II Men have been putting out albums consistently throughout the past decade, but Nick Lachey's 98 Degrees hasn't released anything new since 2000. They'll be at Allstate Arena on July 19, so start choosing the group most deserving of your tossed panties.

Back for good? NKOTB and 98 Degrees both are planning to release new albums this year; Boyz II Men never left

Students and adult leaders pray Monday at Vivian Gordon Harsh Park, where 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton was shot and killed last week. MICHAEL TERCHA/TRIBUNE

Students shine light on violence with walk

Chicago Tribune

Despite demands from two Chicago police officers that they return to class, more than three dozen teenagers marched Monday to call attention to the gun violence that claimed the life of 15-year-old Hadiya Pendleton.

The march went from Pendleton's school, King College Prep, to Harsh Park, where the teen was killed last week. The teenagers who organized the rally and prayer vigil, mostly students at Lindblom Math and Science Academy and CICS Ralph Ellison, said they wanted to put a spotlight on the violence that threatens their lives.

The students said they didn't know Hadiya but were touched by the girl's death because she was a promising youth and an innocent bystander. The teens believed Hadiya's death should prompt city officials to meet with youth leaders and find solutions to the crime plaguing the South Side.

"Things gotta change and it's up to us to change it," said Chelsea James, a 17-year-old senior who helped organize the march. "We could all get shot right now. I'm tired of it."

"We have to go through this every single day. We are living in fear. We can't go to the park without being gunned down. We risk our lives every single day," she said.

Since she was slain Jan. 29, Hadiya has become the latest symbol of Chicago's rampant street shootings. The honor student was killed as she took shelter from the rain with friends who, like her, had just finished their final exams.

Ala. kindergarten hostage freed; gunman killed

MIDLAND CITY, Ala. A gunman who held a 5-year-old boy hostage in an underground bunker in rural Alabama for nearly a week was killed Monday and the child was taken to safety without injury, law enforcement officials said.

FBI agents entered the bunker to rescue the child after fearing that he was in "imminent danger," said Steve Richardson, special agent in charge in Mobile, Ala.

Negotiations with the suspect, identified as 65-year-old Jimmy Lee Dykes, had deteriorated during the previous 24 hours, Richardson said during a televised news conference.

"Mr. Dykes was observed holding a gun," the FBI agent said.

The boy's rescue came on the seventh day of a standoff in southeast Alabama involving Dykes, a retired trucker and veteran of the Vietnam War.

The child was being treated at a local hospital, but was physically unharmed, Richardson added.

It was not immediately clear how Dykes died.

Dykes seized the kindergarten student Jan. 29 after boarding a school bus near his home and killing its driver with four shots from a 9mm handgun, local sheriff's department officials said.

A local law enforcement source said a stun or flash grenade was detonated as part of the operation to free the boy, but further details were not immediately released.

The drama came amid heightened concerns about gun violence and school safety across the U.S. after the December shooting deaths of 20 children and six adults at a Connecticut elementary school.

People hold signs asking drivers to pray for the 5-year-old boy taken hostage last week.

Time out!

That Super Bowl was so nuts, we gotta take another look back

John and Jim Harbaugh will have much to discuss at the next family reunion. While John, the Baltimore coach, was celebrating Sunday's 34-31 Super Bowl win in the New Orleans Superdome, his brother was fuming at a perceived missed call late in the game. "There's no question in my mind that there was a pass interference and then a hold on [Michael] Crabtree on the last one," the San Francisco coach said. While the Harbaugh family sorts out the family drama, we tie up a few more loose ends from Sunday's big game.

REDEYE, TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

Don't blame Beyonce

Jay-Z knows why the power went out just after halftime. "Lights out!!! Any questions??" Hova tweeted during the 35-minute delay, referencing his wife's fierce performance. The NFL begs to differ. While the league still was working with New Orleans officials Monday to determine what caused the outage at the Superdome, it so far has dismissed any connection with Beyonce's halftime show.

The perfect pick

Final score: Baltimore 34, San Francisco 31. Duff Goldman, star of "Ace of Cakes" on the Food Network, made the spot-on prediction Sunday during "Flavor HD" on WGN-AM 720, hours before kickoff of Super Bowl XLVII. "It was a dream, but it was very vivid, it was very different than most of my dreams," the pastry chef and avid Ravens fan said during the radio program. The only problem: He predicted the game would go to overtime. Well, nobody's perfect.

Will (Ferrell) power

Bar Refaeli wasn't the only celeb whose Super Bowl commercial featured an awkward makeout session. It's just that Will Ferrell's ad for Old Milwaukee aired in only three markets: Sherman, Texas; Ardmore, Okla.; and Glendive, Mont. In the ad, Ferrell makes out extensively with an older Asian woman on a bus. The only nod to the product is a brief glimpse of a six-pack of Old Milwaukee in a bag at the front of the bus. OK, then.

The real winner? Vegas

Super Bowl gambling in Nevada rose to a record $98.9 million, a 5 percent increase over last year's total, according to the Nevada Gaming Control Board. Outside Vegas, deadspin.com reported one man lost a prop bet to an offshore sports book on whether Beyonce would show cleavage during her first song.

[Bleep] yeah, Joe Flacco!

A CBS mic inadvertently caught Super Bowl MVP Joe Flacco screaming "This is [bleeping] awesome!" after Sunday's game. Know what else is [bleeping] awesome?

The Baltimore quarterback and his wife, Dana, are about to become parents for the second time, he revealed Monday at an NFL news conference. "We're excited," said Flacco, who was presented with the keys to a 2014 Corvette Stingray for his MVP performance.

SUPER POWER

We'd throw a victory parade for these panelists ... if they ever did anything worth celebrating.

1 Every Super Bowl victory parade should include an appearance by the absolutely wasted 2010 Blackhawks roster. Never forget.	... free brain scans!	... Jay-Z's wife.	... Beyonce. Maybe then people would get excited about parades.	... horses and clowns!
2 What's going on in the Harbaugh household right now?	They're trying to decide what "J" name to give the new dog. Jarma? Janice? Jeezy, Young?	John is installing tons of surge protectors.	It's a blackout, and I wouldn't want to be John Harbaugh.	Mom and Dad are making the boys take turns on who gets to hold the trophy.	If it's like my house, then it's tickle fights until bedtime.
3 Taj Gibson vs. Carlos Boozer. Discuss.	Boozer has had a great year, but like 50 Cent in 2002, Taj Gibson is the future.	Taj is my homie. I don't know. It sort of sounds like Taj Mahal.	Is this the "Whom will we forget first when D-Rose returns?" question?	Taj is a cute baldie. Boozer has a cool name. (What? That's all girls really care about.)	Why would they ever fight? They're teammates.
4 What has been the most surprising part of the Bulls' season so far?	Me not getting invited to sit courtside. Y'all done CHANGED, Chicago Bulls.	Some players have been healthy.	People still paying $8 for hot dogs!!!	None of my jackhole friends with season tix has invited me to a game.	Joakim Noah is my favorite Muppet!
5 Throw some trash talk at the San Jose Sharks.	"The only good thing about the San Jose Sharks was their Starter Jacket."	"Hey Sharks, you bite." I spent hours on this one.	"You Sharks are FINISHED!"	"The Sharks are my least favorite hockey team that I know nothing about!"	"You haven't made it until you're on Shark Week."

Bull market?

FINAL

101

It's been a season of ups and downs for the Bulls in the health department. On Monday at Indiana, they again were without injured Kirk Hinrich and Joakim Noah but returned Carlos Boozer after he missed three games with a sore right hamstring. Let's check in on our injured Bulls, shall we? —REDEYE

Kirk Hinrich

Captain Kirk didn't even make the trip to Indiana on Monday after having his right elbow cleaned out due to an infection. He's expected to be sidelined for at least a week.

Carlos Boozer

The forward finished Monday's game with 10 points and five rebounds in 23 minutes. "[The hamstring is] feeling better," Boozer said. "A lot of treatment, a lot more movement."

Joakim Noah

The newly minted All-Star missed his third straight game Monday with plantar fasciitis in his right foot, but he's not worried. "I'm moving in the right direction," he said. "With a couple more days of treatment, I'm hoping to be OK and try to go on Thursday [at Denver]."

Derrick Rose

Nothing to report here. Patience, Chicago. Patience.

NATE THE GREAT

Nate Robinson earned Eastern Conference player of the week honors Monday, the first time the guard has won that award. Robinson averaged 17.8 points, 6.8 assists and 2.5 steals in four games as the Bulls went 3-1.

MOUTHWATCH

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1897: The Indiana House of Representatives unanimously passed a measure redefining the area of a circle and the value of pi; the bill died in the state Senate.
2002: A federal grand jury indicted John Walker Lindh on 10 charges, alleging he was trained by Osama bin Laden's network and that he conspired with the Taliban to kill Americans.
2011: Former Bears defensive end Richard Dent, who racked up 137 1/2 sacks in his 15-year career and was MVP of the winning Super Bowl XX, was elected to the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

'Argo' director is feeling the love—just not from Oscar

Ben Affleck's awards-season winning streak continued over the weekend as the "Argo" star picked up the best directing of a feature film honor at the Directors Guild of America Awards. He was up against Steven Spielberg ("Lincoln"), Ang Lee ("Life of Pi"), Kathryn Bigelow ("Zero Dark Thirty") and Tom Hooper ("Les Misérables.")

"I worked really, really hard to become the best director I could be, by putting in as [many] hours as I can, and banging my head against a wall, berating myself, lying to myself about whether it's going to work," Affleck said at Saturday's ceremony, according to Entertainment Weekly. "Basically, I got to a point where I was nominated for this award. And I don't think this makes me a real director—but I think it means I'm on my way."

After picking up a screenwriting Oscar for "Good Will Hunting" in 1998, Affleck should've been a shoo-in for a best director nom this year, right? WRONG. He's at the top of the list of snubbed directors, along with Bigelow and Quentin Tarantino for "Django Unchained." But don't worry, Ben, somebody still loves you. Here are all the awards he's gathered for "Argo" so far. —CNN, REDEYE CONTRIBUTED

SHOW GIRL

Right after kick-strutting her way into America's heart at the Super Bowl, Beyoncé announced the Mrs. Carter Show World Tour with a video that can only be described as "Marie Antoinette meets Game of Thrones meets your freshman production of A Midsummer Night's Dream." She'll hit the United Center on July 17. Tickets aren't on sale yet, but you can "RSVP" for updates at beyonce.com. In the meantime, start practicing your "Single Ladies" dance. GETTYIMAGES

Oh, we've got dirt. Get the scoop on your favorite musicians, actors and reality TVers all day long at redeyechicago.com.

"I'm over the moon about the royal baby. But I really can't mount an argument in favor of the monarchy. Is that treason? Do I have to turn in my passport?"

—Keira Knightley, to Marie Claire magazine

Foo's that host?

"Chelsea Lately" is getting the best of Dave Grohl. The Foo Fighters frontman is hosting the E! talk show this week while Chelsea Handler is on vacation. He's got a grab-bag of guests lined up, including Nas, Tenacious D and, uh, Elton John. No word on whether he'll perform with any of them, but hey, cross your fingers!

HOT DATE

FEB. 9

That's the casting call date for "Divergent," a sci-fi movie that will film in Chicago this spring. If you're an Illinois resident with tattoos and piercings, weapons training or a "rural" farmhand look, the producers want you at Cinespace, 2502 W. 16th St., at 10 a.m. Head to facebook.com/divergent extracasting for more details.

Tuned out

Lil Wayne (above left) has not watched the new season of "American Idol"—because new judge Nicki Minaj (right) told him not to. "When I talk to her she always tells me, 'You don't wanna watch that, you're not going to be into it,'" Weezy told The Associated Press. "She knows me. ... It's kind of like a catfight where they be going back and forth type of thing. I'm not into all that."

“That’s happening for sure.”

—Producer Gregory Jacobs, to vulture.com, on whether there will be audience lap dances in the Broadway musical adaptation of "Magic Mike"
